

SPEAKER PLANS A NEW PROGRAM

PRESENT SESSION OF LEGISLATURE MAY SEE OLD IDEALS SHATTERED.

THERE IS MUCH WORK TO DO

Promises to Be Most Busy Winter in Madison if Present Plans Are Carried Out As Arranged.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 16.—When Speaker Charles A. Ingram announces his committee assignments tomorrow morning in the Wisconsin assembly, radical changes will have been effected. A number of the old committees will have been abolished and the legislative work will no longer be handled by only four or five committees. The committee organization will be so re-adjusted that every committee will be a working body, in fact as well as in theory.

This innovation is generally regarded as a triumph for Speaker Ingram, who has spent several months analyzing the committee organization of this and several other states in order to be fully prepared for the expected change. Obsolete committees will be abolished, and new committees will be organized. Aside from the joint committees of both houses, the committee work of the assembly is divided into five branches, several committees working under each branch. The old judiciary committee, which heretofore handled one-third of the work of the legislature, has practically been divided into three committees. There will be a judiciary committee in the assembly of seven members to pass upon the constitutionality and legality of bills. Measures relating to "courts and procedure" will be referred to a committee of that name, composed of five members. The old judiciary committee formerly handled this work, but many important bills were delayed so long that Speaker Ingram deemed it advisable to divide the work of the old committee as above indicated.

There will be a committee on national and interstate relations, which will consider all bills pertaining to national legislation and our relations with other states of the union. Another new committee will be designated as "constitutional amendment" committee. To this body will go all proposals for constitutional amendments, including the important subject of the initiative, referendum and recall, which is slated to be incorporated into the constitution in accordance with the pledges of the republican party.

Fourteen different committees will consider the questions of state administration. The old state affairs committee will be "abolished" to be replaced by one entitled "state and economic betterment," to consist of five members. Questions of elections and the proposed stringent corrupt practices act will go to the committee on elections, of seven members. Problems of taxation will be considered by a committee of five members. A new committee has been planned designated "excise and fees," to consider all questions relating to liquor, including county option. There will be a highway committee of five members, which will begin its hearings upon the good roads problem immediately. The work of the old agricultural committee has been subdivided into a committee on agriculture, composed of seven members, and a committee on agricultural exhibitions, composed of five members.

To the first will go all subjects relating to agriculture and horticulture, and to the latter will be referred problems relating to the state and county fairs, and also farmers' institutes. The committee on military affairs will be composed of five members.

One of the largest committees of the assembly will be that on cities, of nine members. Problems relating to towns and villages will go to a committee by that name, composed of five members. Questions on county organization and laws affecting county administration will go to a "county committee" of five members. There will be a "capital committee" of five members to handle the increased work arising out of the construction of the new statehouse. As usual, there will be a committee on charitable and penal institutions, composed of seven members.

Still another classification of committees will embrace problems of regulation. This will be handled by fifteen separate committees. The old committee on finance, banks and insurance will be abolished. There will be a separate committee on banks composed of five members, and a separate "insurance committee" of five members. The old transportation committee has been subdivided into a committee of five members to consider problems of railroads, gas and water companies. There will be a separate committee of five members to handle all questions affecting express, telegraph and telephone companies. Two extremely important bills, the one relating to the telephone monopoly bill, by the Bell telephone company, and the other, to get control of all the telephone lines in this state.

The question of workmen's compensation, which was the subject of a special investigation by a committee of the last legislature, and which will report to this body, will be considered by a "workmen's compensation committee" of five members. The "welfare of women and children" is the title of a committee of five members to handle problems concerning child labor and hours of labor for women and children. The old committee on public health and sanitation will be retained, to be composed of seven members.

A new committee on "purity of commodities" of five members, will handle questions of adulteration of foods, extracts, etc. The old fish and game committee has been retained and will be composed of seven members.

SCANDAL PROMISED NAVAL DEPARTMENT IN BARRY AFFAIR

Rear Admiral Faces Charges Brought by His Own Personal Staff Asks to Be Retired.

Washington, Jan. 16.—A scandal such as official Washington has never known in United States Navy threatens to be exposed today as a result of the retirement of Rear Admiral Barry, commander of the Pacific Fleet following the filing of personal charges against him by officers. Hints of a possible court martial are freely aired here today.

San Francisco, Jan. 16.—A veil of mystery surrounds the Barry charges here today and all officers in connection refuse to talk on the subject. Barry is alleged to have been found in a compromising position with an apprentice seaman in his cabin by members of his staff and given the opportunity to resign or be exposed, by his officers.

Admiral Barry refuses to make any statement himself but has asked to be retired. He would have been retired on the age limit next October had this matter not come up, being nearly sixty-two years of age.

Admiral Barry this afternoon turned over his command of the second squadron to Rear Admiral Chamney M. Thomas.

District Attorney Fickett declared this afternoon that if the United States navy department does not call a court martial he will proceed against Admiral Barry on charges of misconduct.

SPLIT IN RANKS OF LABOR BODY

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF FEDERATION LABOR HAS KNOTTY PROBLEM.

ELECTRIC WORKERS' FIGHT

Is Main Subject of Consideration At Meeting of Council Commencing Tomorrow, Previous Arbitration Attempts Having Failed.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—What is regarded as one of the most important meetings of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has held in years begun today at the Federation headquarters in this city. The long-standing trouble among the electrical workers is the main subject of consideration. Before the meeting adjourns it is expected action will be taken that will result in a definite settlement of the controversy or else cause a split in the ranks that may widen until it involves the whole fabric of organized labor in America.

The trouble among the electrical workers dates back about three years and already has had almost disastrous effect on the building trades in various parts of the United States and Canada. Two attempts at arbitration have failed utterly and now the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has undertaken to settle the matter.

The majority of the electrical unions, numbering some 350 locals, have been "read out" of the organization by President Gompers. The latter has taken up and supported the cause of the minority, consisting of 1100 local unions, and directed organized labor everywhere to recognize no other electrical union.

The "insurgent" majority of the electrical unions charge President Gompers with using "big stick" methods. They contend that the term "seceders," which he has applied to them, more properly belongs to the minority faction. This contention is based upon the fact that the officials now at the head of affairs in the electrical workers' union were elected at special convention, which at the same time, impeached the old officials.

It is pointed out, moreover, that the so-called insurgents among the electrical workers are fighting for the same principles as President Gompers and his co-defendants in the Buck Stove and Range contempt case, namely their "constitutional rights." The majority of the electrical workers claim as their right the privilege of choosing their own officers and governing themselves, which right, they allege, has been denied them by President Gompers and the Federation, who have gone even farther and enjoined all organized labor from giving the insurgents recognition as union men.

Both sides of the controversy have sent representatives to the present meeting of the executive council. The two factions lay claim to the same name—International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—and both maintain headquarters in Springfield, Ill. The minority faction, which has the support of the American Federation of Labor, is headed by E. J. McNulty, general president; Peter W. Collins, general secretary and William Hogan, general treasurer.

The officials elected by the so-called insurgents when the old officers were impeached, are James J. Held, general president; J. W. Murphy, general secretary; and F. J. Sullivan, general treasurer.

The trouble among the electrical workers dates back to the winter of 1907, when charges of malfeasance of office and incompetence were directed against President McNulty and secretary Collins of the International union. Local unions in both the United States and Canada petitioned for a special convention to thresh out the charges. Secretary Collins refused to call the convention, whereupon the Cleveland local union issued the call. When the special convention opened in St. Louis, three-fourths of the locals, it is said, were represented. The convention heard the charges and impeached the general officers. The American Federation of Labor was drawn into the controversy a short time later when the federation convention, not in Denver, The Denver convention seated the delegates of the impeached officers and declined to recognize the representatives of the insurgent majority.

Since that time, the claim is made, President Gompers and the federation have steadfastly supported the cause of the minority faction of the electrical workers, though ostensibly endeavoring to bring about a friendly settlement of the dispute by arbitration. The insurgents allege that the federation has not been sincere in its efforts to give justice to both sides but, on the other hand, has manifested a disposition from the start of the trouble to favor the minority faction.

The controversy already has spread to other building trades; and the prediction is made that unless a satisfactory settlement is made at an early date a serious split affecting the entire body of organized labor may result.

Stop That Cough in a Minute

Would you give morphine or chloroform to your baby or take it yourself? Of course not. Yet most patent cough cures contain one or both. They stop a cough in a minute, which is dangerous. A cough should be cured internally by healing the lungs, loosening the phlegm, throwing it out, which is done by coughing. Badger Cough Balsam does not contain morphine or chloroform. It is made by percolation from bloodroot, lobelia, pine bark, wild cherry, etc. It cures a cough in a few days without filling the lungs with poisonous phlegm. The irritation is relieved, the lungs healed without danger of pneumonia. It's safe for children or old people. Get a bottle today for 25 cents. Badger Cough Balsam is made by Mr. F. P. Hennig, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist. Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River streets.

TOOK VOWS AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Miss Stella F. Morris Bride of William McAuliffe and Rose Dulin Wedded to Frank Malbon.

St. Patrick's church was the scene this morning of the wedding of Miss Stella F. Morris and William McAuliffe. The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock by Fr. James J. McGinley.

Miss Nellie Morris, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and J. J. McCarthy attended the groom. The bride was prettily attired in a gown of brown silk. Afterward a reception was held at the home and a three-course wedding breakfast was served to relatives of the young couple and a few intimate friends at the home of the bride's parents on Center street.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with carnations and amilies and white balls. Mr. and Mrs. McAuliffe have departed on a wedding trip to Milwaukee and Green Bay.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Morris and has many friends in this city. The groom is a fireman in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad.

Among the guests from out of town were Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Dolan of Beloit, and Margaret, Agnes and Frank McAuliffe of Gratiot.

Miss Rose Dulin was united in marriage to Frank Malbon at St. Patrick's church at six o'clock this morning. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Dean E. E. Kelly. Alice Daly, a cousin of the bride, and William Dulin, a brother, attended the couple. A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. Malbon left for Chicago.

Mrs. Malbon is a daughter of Constable William Dulin and is well known to many in this city. The groom is a cigar manufacturer.

SHARK IS SOLD AS SALMON

Colored With Aniline Dyes It Serves as Excellent Substitute—Authorities Aroused.

New York.—Health authorities in the east, and more particularly in New York, are on the watch lest sharks' flesh, "dressed" with aniline dyes and sold as smoked salmon, be imported from the Pacific coast, where it has been discovered in city markets.

The manufacturer of the "salmon" has been traced to Seattle. How long the practice of doctoring up cheap whitefish with the brown coloring stuff and how long the market has been supplied with this delicacy is a problem which San Francisco is now grappling.

The unearthing of the fraud was not more startling than the manner of discovery was curious. How would you like to be the chemist of the department of health, charged with the duty of seeing that your fellow-citizens had pure food to eat, and find yourself munching shark's flesh when you thought you were eating the best of salmon?

That is what happened to Assistant City Chemist Fred West in France. West was eating his noonday luncheon the other day in the upstairs laboratory of the department. Sitting in to a tasty-looking salmon sandwich, prepared by his wife at home, the chemist met disappointment. West began to investigate. The "salmon" turned out to be a cheap whitefish colored. He secured some more at home and a fresh supply from a local market, where the first had been purchased.

Analysis showed that brown aniline dyes had been used to give the fish a spurious color, the product smoked and then shipped from the north as salmon.

METHOD OF TICKLING TURTLE Boston Man Will Use Newspaper Editorial to Prove He Was Not Cruel to Animals.

Boston.—Maximilian Fischer, proprietor of a grill in Federal street, proudly exhibited a 100-pound turtle in the window of his restaurant two months ago. Max was immediately haled into court and was fined $25 for cruelty to animals in keeping one Florida turtle on his back.

Max protested vehemently that the only way to keep a turtle in safety and know where he is when you want him is to keep him on his back. He maintained that the turtle wasn't hurt in person or dignity and didn't care a snap whether he was on his head or his heels. Max's plea was in vain. He appealed the $25 fine.

Now the Florida Times in a lengthy editorial says that Max was perfectly humane in placing the turtle on his back and that the animal itself was rather pleased over such treatment than hurt.

Fischer has sent for a copy of the Times, and will submit the editorial when his case comes up on appeal as "Exhibit B." "Exhibit A" has gone the way of all good turtles.

It pays to read the ads.

RED HAT FOR AMERICAN.

Washington, D. C.—From a source close to the pope it was learned today that there is more than an even chance for an American cardinal to be named at the next consistory, which will be held in the near future.

Independently of the promotion to the red hat of some American prelate, there will be a long list of changes in Catholic circles throughout the United States. Several bishops will be promoted from other offices and there will also be a number of shifts.

There are now nineteen vacancies in the sacred college. Some of these have existed for periods of two to four years. These require a greater number of candidates than is available and an American will more than likely be included in the list. The prelates mentioned for the promotion are Mr. Falconio, papal delegate to the United States; Italian born, but naturalized more than 40 years ago; Archbishop Farley and Archbishop Ireland. There is also mention of Mr. O'Connell.

Good Work in South. Miss Winifred Holt, who is prominent in the work of the Civic Federation in New York, has come to the aid of the southern colony, that was established by Miss Holman in North Carolina 11 years ago. The object is to help the mountaineers to a better life physically first and then do what can be done for their intellectual development. All these mountaineers are said to be "baptized ancestors," that is, they are descended from the best class of English immigrants at the time of the settlement.

Local Pride. "How did Crimmon Gulch manage to get such a showing in the census?" "Diplomacy," replied Broncho Hob. "We got the census taker into the Toxy Glow saloon and didn't let him go to work until he was seeing double."

Cigars Must be Kept In Proper Condition The Condition An Important Consideration in the Quality of the Smoke

Cigars must be kept at the proper condition of moisture, neither too wet nor too dry. Too wet they are heavy and do not smoke freely or evenly. Too dry they are brittle and burn up in ash quickly besides tasting bitter.

It is utterly impossible to keep a cigar case at the proper degree of moisture by means of a wet sponge or blotting paper, as many dealers attempt to do. When this is tried they often dry out and even if they are moistened the second time they lose some of their original flavor and aroma.

Our case contains a patented system of moisture control; not used in any other case in town; which absolutely controls the degree of moisture at all times. This one, you'll say so too. We suggest the Black and White at 5c.

HISTORIC CASE IN U. S. COURT TODAY

Action of Virginia vs. West Virginia, Unsettled After 35 Years, in Courts Again.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—The long drawn out case of the State of Virginia against the State of West Virginia is on the docket of the Supreme Court of the United States for hearing this week. The case originated in the question of the division of the public debt of the Old Dominion at the time of the separation of the western counties and the formation of the State of West Virginia. The dispute involves about $33,000,000 and has been dragging through the courts more than 35 years.

WILL PUSH BACK TIME IN FRANCE

French Time Will Hereafter Be Made to Agree With That Standard of Other Countries.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Paris, Jan. 16.—French time, which is 5 hours and 9 minutes ahead of New York time and 9 minutes faster than Greenwich time, will be set back, French folk will therefore live 18 minutes in 4, legally. France has been out of which with all other countries since the time Congress met in Washington some years ago and agreed on a standard time. The hour is now given by wireless from Eiffel Tower to ships at sea and the necessity of giving time as the rest of the world "carries it" causes the set-back of the clocks.

EXPOSITION SOUGHT BY TWO BIG CITIES

San Francisco and New Orleans Both Putting Forth Endeavors to Get 1915 Panama Expo.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—The proverbial hand of milk and honey laid out on Washington today, Louisiana fruits and delicious wines, to say nothing of Old Hen cocktails, Ramos Gin fizzes and cafe brulo jambalaya practices, were to be had for the asking at the headquarters established by the delegations from San Francisco and New Orleans. And all because these two cities are rival aspirants for the exposition which it is proposed to hold in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the Panama canal. Congress has fixed tomorrow as the day for taking a vote on the matter. New Orleans declares that San Francisco is too far from the center of population, and that many persons would be deprived of an opportunity to visit the exposition for that reason. In answer to this argument the Golden Gate comes back with the figures showing the great success of the two expositions already held on the Pacific Coast, at Portland in 1905 and Seattle in 1909.

MODERN APPLIANCE IN OLD STRUCTURE

Louvre Museum in Paris, Nearly 500 Years Old, Will Have "Penny-in-the-Slot" Elevator.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Paris, Jan. 16.—An elevator is to be installed in the Louvre Museum, the floors and ceilings of which, constructed partly by Francis I., almost 500 years ago are being cut to make way for the modern American machinery. It will hold but two or three persons, and will probably be a "penny-in-the-slot" arrangement wherein one must pay to ride.

BOOST JACKSON FOR SERGEANT-AT-ARMS

Friends of Democratic "Boss" of Indiana Seeking to Secure Position for Him in House.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 16.—If U. S. Jackson, who is chairman of the Democratic State committee of Indiana, does not land the position of sergeant-at-arms of the Sixty-second Congress, it will not be because of inactivity on the part of his friends and supporters. Today a special train of "Jackson boomers," among whom were many of the foremost Democratic leaders of the state, departed from this city for the national capital. The delegation will arrive in Washington in time to present the claims of Jackson at the big Democratic House caucus next Thursday.

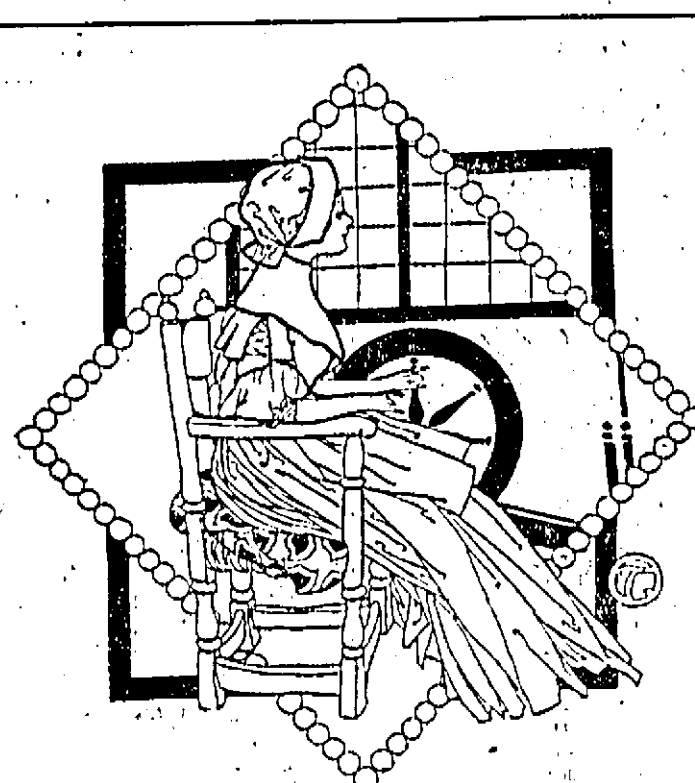

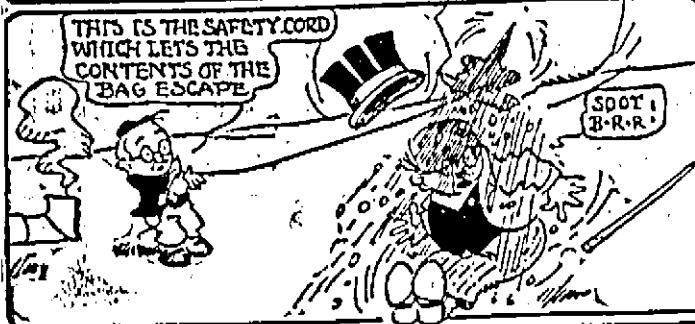

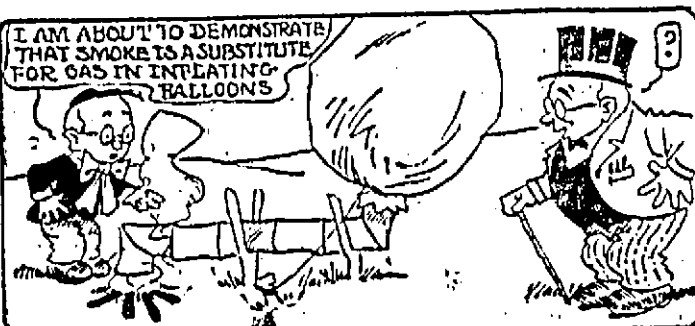

HAS RETIRED FROM ACTIVE SERVICE

Col. Alexander Rodgers, in U. S. Army for Nearly Forty Years Retired at Own Request.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—Col. Alexander Rodgers, who recently has been commanding the Sixth Regiment of Cavalry, at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, closed his active career in the army today, having been transferred to the retired list on his own application. Col. Rodgers has seen nearly forty years of active service. He is from New Jersey and was graduated from West Point in 1875. During the war with Spain he served as a major and inspector general in the volunteer establishment. Later he took part in suppressing the insurrection in the Philippines.

THE SPRING ELECTION.

Candidates for the spring election are already being discussed along party lines and plans are being made for an active campaign. It is to be regretted that Janesville, as a city, has never escaped from the bondage of political thralldom, so far as politics in municipal government is concerned. The one thing of most vital importance to every taxpayer is a wholesome administration of city affairs. There ought to be some plan devised whereby the voters can get together, regardless of party ties, and select the best men available to conduct the affairs of the city.

If there are to be two parties, one should represent the conservative, law-respecting and law-abiding element, free from any party label, arrayed against the lawless and irresponsible citizens, found to greater or less extent in all communities.

The question of prohibition will not enter into the spring election, as that was settled by the voters a year ago, and public sentiment has not changed to any great extent, but the question of regulation and law enforcement is still with us.

When Mayor Carle was elected, two years ago, he adopted as a slogan, "Obey the law," and it has been no fault of his that his mandate has not been carried out.

While the office of mayor is important, the office of councilman is equally important, as the mayor is dependent upon the council for support. Inasmuch as we have rejected the commission plan of government, we ought to do the next best thing, and that is, elect all aldermen by a vote of the people at large, then nominate the best men in every ward, regardless of party, and elect them.

The Gazette has always been a republican paper, on state and national issues, and has supported party candidates for city office, because politics has been the issue, but the paper believes that the time has come when the voters, who have the best interests of the city at heart, should get together and select men to administer city government who have more to recommend them than a party label.

Some of the men who aspire to office, at the present time, are totally unqualified for the responsibilities which they seek to assume, and yet men of this class will be elected unless the voters take the matter in hand and unite in efforts to select candidates qualified to fill the offices intelligently and acceptably.

The columns of the Gazette are open for the discussion of this question from the standpoint of the best government to be secured, for the best little city in the west. The subject is worth discussing, don't you think?

RENEW THE EFFORT.

It is rumored that the Brunswick-Balke Collender company has not yet fully decided on a location, and if this is the case, Janesville ought to make a desperate effort to secure the industry. The branch to be established in one of ten, and every last one of them has made good. Starting with some two hundred skilled workmen and increasing within a few years to several times that number, is the record established, and this would be repeated in Janesville, if the factory could be secured. That means in five years a growth of from 4,000 to 5,000 in population as the result of securing a single factory.

The people generally do not know how near the city came to securing this factory two months ago. The final proposition made by the company was twenty-five acres of land and a cash bonus of $85,000 to be used in a building. The location demanded was the Bailey farm at Spring Brook. The Industrial and Commercial club offered to secure the land and $40,000, which seemed to be the limit. That meant a difference of $25,000, and other cities stood ready to make this good, although the company preferred Janesville, and would have been glad to come here.

Had there been any possible way for the city legally to make up this deficiency, it would have been a good investment from a financial standpoint, as many vacant lots would have been occupied, and tax rolls increased. The city needs something to give it a start. One good factory influences another, and industries are necessary to municipal development. If not too late, efforts should be renewed to secure the Chicago company.

AMERICAN COTTON.

Cotton exports from the United States in 1910 aggregated 530 million dollars in value, exceeding by more than 60 million dollars the highest record ever heretofore made. The quantity exported, however, was materially less than in certain earlier years, having been but 3,641 million pounds, against 4,374 million in 1908, when the value was but 439 million dollars. The average export price in 1910 was 14½ cents per pound, against practically 10 cents in 1908. The high record year for quantity, the average export price in 1910 having been higher than in any year since 1874. December, 1910, also shows the highest monthly record, the total value of cotton exports in that month being, in round terms, 103 million dollars, while no earlier month ever reached the 100 million dollar line. The average export price in December was 14½ cents per pound, while in the months of July and August, the average was 15¢ per pound.

The steel industry of the country is in a peculiar condition. The large steel corporations are maintaining prices which prohibit sales and as a result many mills are closed down, or running light. Mr. Brandeis, the Boston attorney, who claims that the railroads are losing a million dollars a day by bad management, says that the railroads are largely interested in the steel mills, and while badly in need of rails, are not demanding lower prices. The railroads claim to be waiting for the decision of the interstate Commerce Commission, on freight rates. In the meantime the industry is stagnant, and many men are idle.

The El Paso Herald, with which Mr. J. C. Wilmuth, formerly of the Gazette, is connected, has just issued a 40-page edition devoted to southwestern progress in general, and El Paso in particular. This enterprising Texas city had a population ten years ago of 10,000, but numbers today more than 35,000. Development in every department has kept pace with the growth. It is a metropolitan city noted for wealth and enterprise, and the "Herald," with more than 10,000 circulation, appears to be in advance of the procession.

The issue which confronts the democratic party in 1912 is a geographical issue. Already the lines are being drawn between the east and west. Woodrow Wilson is called the Wall Street candidate, and Bryan, whose popularity in the west is still recognized as a political force, is in a receptive mood. The next democratic national convention will not be a love-feast.

If the case of Senator Stephenson is to be investigated, why not go back half a dozen years and exploit the whole situation. The old gentleman could tell a story that would be highly entertaining, and the money spent for his own election would look like thirty cents compared with previous investments.

Cleaning house at Washington is likely to consume the time of the present session, and the lawmakers will not have a chance to create much of a disturbance, before congress adjourns, which perhaps is just as well for the country.

Which? A Chicago magistrate ordered a man not to speak to his wife or permit her to speak to him for two weeks. Problem: Was the man convicted or acquitted?

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

APPRECIATION.

Appreciation of another's work put into kindly speech is all too rare, but recently I have been the beneficiary of such a word.

Here am I, one of the numerous writers, talking, like an actor might, to an invisible and dumb audience.

Do I please?

I do not always know. I only know I do my best. In the nature of things I seldom hear applause.

I know my motive is good, for I am not so built that, like a nickel-in-the-slot machine, you can put in a topic and draw out a "Heart to Heart Talk."

To write as I could always wish to write I must feel the urge—something must take hold of me. And then it is with the keenest pleasure that I put down the words.

Phahly, I must work within certain lines. I must write of things of human interest, and I must be brief. And thus I have been writing—every day for about three years—for this newspaper and many others.

Once in awhile in a comradely way I hear from some one in the audience, but should I depend upon such infrequent expressions I should become thoroughly discouraged.

But now—

Just the other day, when I was feeling a little blue, came a ringing salute from a man of big brain and big heart. It was the Rev. Samuel H. Purdie, D. D., who wrote me the letter. He is the popular divine whose printed sermons had failed to become more popular in his day than Talmage's sermons in his day—and justly so.

He had never known me, but had read some of my talks. Permitt me to quote one sentence from his letter:

"If your talks catch others as they do me I'm sure many a fellow carrying the heavy end of a log will look up and take a fresh grip and many a woman with aching head and aching heart will hum a hymn of fresh inspiration."

Wasn't it fine that he should hunt me up to say that?

And it did not make me proud, either. While it encouraged me, the letter made me take a fresh grip on my own task and hum a hymn of fresh inspiration.

Ah, there's hope and heartening in a voice of cheer!

Speak it, friends!

Rest the weary ear of mortals, hurt with the continuous strain of the strife, by the strangely sweet music of brotherly appreciation.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)

By WALT MASON.

I'm rather tired of Dr. Cook. I don't intend to read his book, or any other that he may spring concerning all his voyaging. I'd rather read some simple tale about a man who drives a nail, or saws a board or fixes a shoe, and buys his kids a round of shoes.

Between ourselves, how cheap men play their dizzy game, and pile up bundles of long green by gabbling in some magazine. I stand up strong for Richard Roe who earns a modest slice of dough, by shoeing mules or mowing grass, or fustling round with window-glass. All through the week he toils and sweats; on Saturdays he pays his debts. He spends his honest, useful life obscurely, with his kids and wife. One quiet man like Richard Roe, who fixes clocks or shovels snow, or ties his fingers binding books, is worth a whole parade of Cooks. It makes no odds to any soul how near the doc was to the Pole; it makes no odds to any man what queer delusions filled his can; it makes no odds what fashions for gaudy gals gave their shoes and clothes. The only thing that counts on earth, the only thing of storied worth, is work by this I do not mean the working of some magazine.

AUTO VS. ICE BOAT LATEST RACE PLAN

Harry Nowlan Plans Novel Event to Be Held at Lake Koshkonong in Near Future.

Auto racing on the ice as a sport full of the elements of excitement and danger is the latest word for the seekers of the nouveau. Its most ardent advocate in this city at the present time is Harry P. Nowlan, secretary and treasurer of the Badger State Machine company, who is to race his 30 horse-power Buick against the ice boats on Lake Koshkonong as soon as the ice is smooth enough for the contest. A surface almost glassy is desired for the machine and as soon as the lake is less rough and there is sufficient wind to propel the boats, the match between wheels and runners will be on.

Speeding in an automobile on the ice is said to possess more attractions for the lovers of auto racing than the ordinary races. No extra equipment is required beyond placing chains on all four wheels of the car and the speed developed is greater than on land and a great deal of the danger of skidding is eliminated. A number of the auto enthusiasts in the city are awaiting the trial between the boats and the car.

SLIPPERY WALKS A MENACE TO LIMBS

City Should See That Liberal Supply of Sand Is Used Everywhere.

This Bad Weather. It is barely possible that the city of Janesville may be defendants in several damage suits resulting from broken limbs through falls on the icy pavements. In some places a small quantity of sand has been spread by the city workmen but there are many bad cross walks and side walks in the business district that have not been touched. The walk at the corner of Milwaukee and River street is exceedingly dangerous. The walks around Jefferson school are also in bad shape despite the fact that a small quantity of sand has been spread over the worst places and steps. The walks through the court house park have been fairly well sanded but many individual walks in all parts of the city are in a most dangerous condition. Among the accidents recorded is that of Robert Cole, of 411 Galena street who fell on the ice and sprained his left hip. A broken arm also resulted from the icy walk at the Jefferson school, a first grader being the victim for the second time this winter. If necessary an extra force of men should be put on by the city to make the walks safe if the property owners do not comply with the law and do so themselves.

CLEVER CONTESTS ON THE CLUB'S PROGRAM

Three Good Boxing Contests Scheduled for Monday Night.

According to the match-maker of the Janesville Athletic club, under whose auspices three good boxing contests have been arranged for January 23 at the West Side rink, the coming card promises to be the strongest that the club has yet put on. The win-up is between Gus Christy of Milwaukee, said to be a most clever exponent of the "manly art," and Spike Kelly of Chicago, one of the clever, snappy boxers that Illinois has in training. The boys will weigh in at 145 pounds. Nels Larson of Evansville, who has lots of grit and some skill, will be matched against Young Richards, a Madison colored boy, at 162 pounds. Kid DeMunn of Quincy, who proved himself to be a very clever "bait" artist at his former appearance here, is to square up against Young Kelly of Milwaukee at 140 pounds. It is expected that there will be a good delegation of visitors here from Monroe, Madison, Evansville, and Beloit for the evening's entertainment.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE TO MEET IN WASHINGTON

Leaders in Commercial Life Will Discuss Problems of Importance to the Whole Country.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—Delegates to the forty-first annual meeting of the National Board of Trade, which will open at the New Willard Hotel tomorrow, have begun to arrive in the city. Those in charge of the meeting expect an attendance of fully 1,000 leaders in the commercial life of the country. A two-day program has been arranged, providing for the discussion of practically every important proposition pending before Congress, National banking and currency legislation, the tariff, reciprocity, railroad rate regulation, ship subsidy, the diplomatic and consular service and the immigration problem are among the important matters that will receive attention.

ASSAULT CASE WAS DISMISSED TODAY

Charges Against Michael Burns Were Not Pressed By Wife and Complaint Was Dropped.

On motion of District Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie, the complaint against Michael Burns, charged with assault to do great bodily harm, was dismissed by Judge C. L. Pfeiffer, when Burns was brought into municipal court this morning for his examination. The district attorney stated that Mrs. Burns had recovered sufficiently from her injuries to be removed from the hospital and was able to be about the home. Mrs. Burns did not desire to make any complaint and the case was therefore dropped. Burns promised to take the pledge.

It was not expected that the woman would press the charges against Burns and the outcome is gratifying to his friends, who regretted the temporary loss of control which caused his arrest. It is said that he has not been a drinking man, but a hardworking out and any lapses from strict sobriety. It is claimed have been brought about by unhappy conditions at home, where it is alleged his wife has not done her share toward making their wedded life a happy one. The sympathy of those who know the family is entirely with the man.

REGULAR MEETING OF BAPTIST MEN'S CLUB

Excellent Program Has Been Prepared On Subject Of Public Institutions.

At the regular meeting of the Baptist men's club Tuesday evening at 8:45 supper will be served and the topic "Public Institutions" will be considered. Dr. A. L. Burdick will act as leader for the evening and the speakers on the program have been secured with view to their special acquaintance with the institution under consideration. All members of the church and congregation are invited. The program follows:

"Our County Farm and Poor House," "Special Education of Blind and Deaf," "The State Prison," "The State Hospital for the Insane," "The State Reformatory and Schools for Correction," Judge Chas. L. Pfeiffer.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Clever Exhibit: One of the cleverest advertisements for the coming poultry show is to be seen in Hall & Sayles window where diminutive chickens with tiny chickens are to be seen, one larger bird, is chained to a stake with the inscription "I have been to every show for ten years" and a hroville figure acting as secretary who asks the public not to put the feathers from the chickens tails for ornaments. Behind it stand the cups offered for prizes in the different classes.

Articles Of Incorporation: A verified copy of the articles of incorporation for the Metropolitan Realty Company filed by F. A. Cobb, A. R. Thelon, and A. F. Horn of Janesville, was received at the office of register of deeds Saturday afternoon. The capital stock was $5,000.

Son Born: Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Warr are the proud parents of an eight-pound baby boy born yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Warr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Murdock, North Franklin street.

An Error: A typographical error made in the publication of the names of the officers of Canton Janesville No. 3, I. O. E. Militant, gave the name of Lieutenant as W. H. Brill instead of W. H. Blair.

F. A. Will Meet: There will be a regular meeting of Rock Council, F. A. A., at E. B. Hill's, 520 N. Chatham street, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. J. T. Wright No Better: It is reported today that J. T. Wright, who was overcome by coal gas last Tuesday evening, is about the same and no improvement is noted. There is small hope of his recovery.

Finds for Defendant: Judge Grimm returned to this city today and rendered a decision in the matter of the appeal from taxation of costs in the case of Adah Brunson vs. Beloit, Dolan Lake and Janesville I. O. E. company. His decision was that the defendant is entitled to tax costs upon trial in the circuit court, for reason that the defendant succeeded in having the amount reduced, which had been avoided by the commissioner and was therefore the prevailing party under the statute.

CHANGED DATE TO HAVE THE ATTRACTION THEY WANTED

It is not understood by some why the Robert Burns, birthday celebration, which should have come on January 25, is set for the 18th. The anniversary of the author should be celebrated on the former date, but owing to the fact that the services of Burns, the entertainer, could not be obtained on that date, it was seen fit to have the entertainment one week previous. Burns and his company will give a performance in mystery and fun at Assembly hall at 7:45 the evening of the 18th.

CHARGES AGAINST HENRY DELANEY WERE DISMISSED

Vagrancy Complaint Dropped On Motion Of District Attorney and Delaney Allowed To Go To Work.

Vagrancy charges against Henry Delaney, whose trial was set for this morning in municipal court, were dismissed by the judge on motion of the district attorney. The chief witness in the case did not care to appear against Delaney and had secured work for the man who promised to accept the position offered him. Delaney, it was alleged, had approached persons on the street, attempting to borrow money. The judge gave him a short lecture, saying that the next time Delaney was brought up the penalty of six months imprisonment, provided by law, would have to be imposed. Delaney gave his word to the court that he would mend his ways and start working.

Building Trades. San Rafael, Cal. Jan. 16.—The annual convention of the California State Building Trades Council began here today with Mayor P. H. McCarthy of San Francisco, president of the council, presiding. The sessions will last about a week, during which time many questions of interest and importance to the membership throughout the State will be considered.

Oregon Labor Federation. Salem, Ore., Jan. 16.—Delegates from many of the principal cities and towns of Oregon assembled here today on the opening of the annual convention of the State Federation of Labor. Sessions will continue for several days. Measures to be introduced at the present session of the legislature affecting the interests of organized labor will form the principal topics of discussion. The annual reports of the several officers show the affairs of the federation to be in a satisfactory condition, with a gratifying increase in membership the past year.

JANESVILLE'S GREAT POULTRY SHOW OPENS

Prize-Winning Birds Are Pouring In To Be City's Guests For Few Days By Every Train.

The west side rink was the scene of much confusion and strenuous activity this morning, it being the opening day of the big poultry show. Although this was the date set for the formal start, there will not be much in the line of an exhibition until tomorrow noon, as the number of entries far exceed the outside number set by the promoters and it is taxing the patience and spare time of every one of the officials to get the visiting birds properly located and taken care of.

Despite the chilly atmosphere, all the feathered guests that have arrived so far, seem to be in the best of spirits if the noise and hubbub which they make can be taken as evidence of their feelings. It seems as if each bird there from the blue ribbon winners to those making their first appearance, were trying to call attention to themselves.

The 500 brand new coops are all set up and ready for use. The exhibit promises to be of interest not only to the raisers of poultry but also to the layman as the show has attracted some of the finest fowls in the country. There are a score of elegant prizes both in cash and cups to be given away this year.

SPEAKER PLANS A NEW PROGRAM

now committee of seven members will deal with the important problems of "conservation," including waterpower rights, conservation of the soils, forests and minerals. An exhaustive investigation of these subjects has already been made by a special committee of the legislature as well as by the Wisconsin conservation commission and the state geological survey. The old committee on lumber, manufactures and mining has been abolished, to be supplanted by a new one designated "commerce and manufactures," of five members. "Parks, playgrounds and city planning" is a new committee of five members, one of the most important phases of its work being the consideration of bills relating to city planning, including the proposed lake front park for the capital at Madison; the several present and proposed state parks, and extension of playground development in towns and cities. Heretofore, questions concerning municipal living conditions have been handled by the committee on cities. On the new organization, these subjects will be handled by a separate committee of five members. The name of this committee will be "city conditions." There will be a special committee of five members to handle country living conditions, to be so named. The problems coming before it will include legislation to make farm and rural life more desirable and attractive to the city boy and to the boy already on the farm. This committee will, it is expected, seek to check the exodus from the country to the city.

The fourth branch of legislative work relates to education and will be dealt with by three different committees. As before, there will be an education committee composed of seven members. A new committee entitled "vocational education committee," of seven members, will consider, trade schools, the German continuation school system advocated effectively by Dr. Charles Charles McCarthy, and similar subjects. There will also be a committee on libraries of five members.

The fifth branch of proposed legislation will embrace four committees. One, of three members, will be on engrossed bills; another, of three members, on third reading; and one of three members on enrolled bills. The committee on legislative procedure will contain five members, of which the speaker will be a member ex-officio. In the past this committee has been composed of the leaders of the predominating party. This year both the democratic and the socialist parties will have one member each on this committee. This principle is one that was espoused by the insurgents in the Wisconsin assembly tomorrow will be due principally to the initiative of Speaker Ingram.

In all, there will be forty-two assembly committees, compared with thirty-eight heretofore. As usual, there will be joint committees on finance and revision. On the former the assembly will have a representation of blue members, and on the revision committee of five members.

Unreal.

Mrs. A.—Then you didn't care much for the social comedy?

Mrs. Z.—No, indeed; it was too unreal.

Mrs. A.—In what way, my dear?

Mrs. Z.—"Why, six months elapse between act 1 and act 2, and yet the Van Stylowoods have the same cook. You know that don't sound possible."

A Nest for Baby.

A large clothes basket lined and filled with a many-times folded blanket or large cushion makes a cozy nest for a baby, and in this the little one has room to lie and stretch his little limbs about. It makes a change from the cot, and the baby is more out of draughts in the basket than when lying on a hearthrug in front of the fire.

Little Bed-Time Tales By EDITH HAVENS

The Birch Tree

ONCE upon a time there grew in the beautiful forest a graceful birch tree. It was tall and slender and curved a bit as if its topmost branches wanted to see what was going on down below among the lower growing things.

But the birch tree was unhappy. "What good am I—of what possible use am I in this world?" it was continually asking itself. "Here I grow in the very same place, day after day, week after week, year after year doing nothing but wave back and forth in the wind—oh what good am I?"

One beautiful day while the birch tree was still brooding over his troubles there came a sound in the forest—a different sound than the birch had ever heard before. There seemed to be a low hum and then thump, thump, thump.

"What can it be?" whispered the birch tree to one of his neighbors close by and then into view, from among the trees, there appeared two men with something swung over their shoulders.

The birch tree had heard of men. Traveling birds had told him all about them, but to save his life he could not think what that funny looking stick with something like silver on the end, swung over his shoulder might be. The men stopped directly in front of the tree.

"Here is a fine one," one of them said and then whizz through the air flashed the funny stick—it was an ax, and the birch tree trembled for he suddenly felt warm all over. Then he seemed to grow all sleepy and not knowing it he sank softly to the ground.

When he awoke he was in some kind of a mill. He could hear the whirr of machinery and then he was lifted up and placed before a great singing saw blade. Somehow he felt perfectly contented and happy as he felt the warm lips of the saw kissing him and he knew that he had been divided into many pieces.

Well, what do you think finally happened to the birch tree? Part of him was made into pure white note paper which found its way into the home of a sweet little girl. And what wonderful letters she wrote to her papa who was away from home sometimes.

No longer did the birch complain. He was so very happy.

Another part of him was fashioned into one of the most beautiful tables you ever saw and he loved the wonderful letters she wrote to her papa who sat by his side the whole day long.

Ah! yes, indeed, was the birch tree of some use in the world. He was just a bit impatient at first but after a time rare things came to him.

People who are patient always have splendid things come to them sooner or later.

Don't you think so?

First Picture of Country Home of J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., at Glen Cove, L. I. View Showing Rear of home of J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr.

New York, N. Y.—When J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., returned from Europe a little more than a year ago, it was announced that he had acquired an extensive property on Long Island, and that he would build on his estate a residence that would cost $1,000,000. This statement Mr. Morgan denied. The above picture is the first showing Mr. Morgan's new home. It is on East Island, Glen Cove, L. I., and has an extensive outlook over the sound and the surrounding country. The house is built of red brick, with limestone trimmings, and has a slate roof. No details as to the architectural features could be obtained, as Mr. Morgan declines to permit the architects, LaFarge & Morris, to say anything in regard to the building or its cost.

HERE'S THE BOGEY MAN OF THE SPEEDWAY.

Indianapolis, Ind.—"Zip, the What is it?" "The Missing Link," "King of the Speed Demons," or many other appellations could be applied to this freakish looking monster, but in reality it is the everyday face of a score or more of the rough riders of the gasoline bronchos on the Indianapolis motor speedway. These cylinder knight errants are the testees who drive the newly built cars over the 2½-mile brick course and face the chilling blasts that sweep over that racing plant eight or nine hours a day.

Hours to Remember.

The hours I remember most joyfully are the hours in which some unselfish effort or sacrifice stirred the sluggish pulses of my heart.—J. Baldwin Brown.

Curious to Know.

Little Paul had been taken by his father to hear the band play. He listened a while and then said: "Papa, why don't these men stop playing and go to work?"

Monkeys and Parrots.

A lung specialist was talking about a famous scientist who had contracted consumption from a lot of consumptive monkeys that he had been experimenting upon.

"This should be a lesson and a warning to us all," he said, "for nothing is more dangerous to the lungs' health than to have a monkey about the house. Practically all monkeys have consumption in this climate, and it is just as easy to take consumption from a monkey as from a man or woman. It is the same with parrots. They, too, have consumption, and they, too, are most apt to give the disease to those who pet them. As for me, rather than live in the same house with a pet monkey or a pet parrot I would take a cut in the hopeless ward of some consumptives' hospital."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Wedding Day Reminder.

William James, the famous psychologist of Harvard, said at a dinner in Boston:

"An odor often brings back memories that we had thought buried forever. As we regard some strange landscape it often seems to us that we have been just here before. The oddest, the most momentous associations oftentimes attach themselves to the most trivial things.

"Thus at a Thanksgiving dinner that I once attended the hostess said to a sour faced man on my left:

"May I help you to some of the boiled rice, Mr. Smith?"

"Rice? No, thank you—no rice for me," Smith answered vehemently. "It is associated with the worst mistake of my life!"

Costs of Office.

On the day after his election the chief magistrate of a certain town in the Midlands who enjoys the reputation of being rather "near" in money matters was asked for a subscription to the local football club.

"I really can't do it," he replied. "Just look at the outlay! I've already been put to through accepting office!"

And he produced a small ledger he scribbled on the cover "Maynasty Expenses." On the top line of the first inside page was the entry, "Dress suit, 12."—Reynolds' Newspaper.

DEMOCRATS FAIL TO CARRY THEIR POINT

Committee of Wisconsin Assembly Will Be Named By Speaker and Not By Members in Party Caucus.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 16.—When the assembly is called to order tomorrow morning, the attempt of the democratic minority to have the committee of the house named by the members of the party caucus system will have fallen through. Speaker Ingram will announce his selection and there will be no further trouble.

This consummation is practically assured following numerous conferences during the "over-Sunday" recess, in which both democrats and republicans have participated, and also because of the discovery that others besides republicans will be recognized in the selection of chairmen of various committees. Several democrats are said to have been given these titular positions, and altogether the makeup of the numerous subsidiary bodies of the assembly has been settled in a manner that will disarm the opposition.

It is declared that the whole squabble as precipitated by the democratic minority was in reality a "frame-up" by the boss of Senator La Follette, in the faint hope of embarrassing his chances for reelection. Responsibility for the alleged deal is laid to Congressman Charles H. Volz, who arrived in Madison the night before the democratic resolution was offered in the house.

Always Lucky.

McConnell—Sure, isn't Larry always the lucky boy?

Murphy—Lucky, do you call him, when it was only yesterday that he fell, breakin' his leg an' his arm?

McConnell—Fullo, an' wasn't he lucky on that occasion, wld th' accident takin' place within twenty feet of th' hospital?

Judging a Man.

"You can judge a man by the company he keeps," said Uncle Allen Sparks, "but you can't always judge him by his habits. Some men are a good deal better than the cigars they smoke."

The Tune of the Engine.

Engineers, both locomotive and stationary, judge of the condition of their engines largely by their "tunes" when running. Every engine has a tone of its own, and an experienced engineer, with bandaged eyes, could unhesitatingly pick out an engine to which he was accustomed. As a locomotive roars along the rails, the engineer is listening, though subconsciously, to its familiar tune, and if there comes the slightest discord, or if the tone changes, he knows instantly that something is wrong and makes an investigation at the earliest opportunity. He may have no ear for music, but the change in the tone of his great machine will be at once noted.

Austro-Hungarian Vintage.

This season's vintage in Austria-Hungary is one of the worst on record, the estimated volume of wine produced being less than half the usual average. A cold, early summer, followed by violent hailstorms, is largely responsible for this unfortunate condition.

Some of the wine growing districts around Vienna have this year no wine at all. In parts of southern Hungary the vines are absolutely bare, having neither leaves nor grapes. Hailstorms and floods devastated vast areas in Hungary and completely ruined the rice fields in northern Italy. The Austrian hailstorm insurance companies have been very hard hit, paying out losses amounting to many millions.

PLAN PUBLICATION OF WISCONSIN LAWS

Bill Will Be Introduced During Present Session Providing for Compilation Every Two Years.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 16.—A new volume to be published every two years and containing a compilation of all the statutes and amendments thereto and including the previous session laws is the plan provided in a bill which will be introduced in the legislature this week. The bill has been drawn by the state revisor, Lyman J. Nash, and his assistant, Arthur P. Deitz, and marks a signal forward step in the provision for compact publication of the statutes in such form that the law can be found without consulting innumerable volumes. Heretofore, there has been a compilation of the statutes only once in eight years, and there has been little actual revision since 1878. Under this new plan the revisors also will proceed with the work of revision, reporting a new act to the legislature as often as possible for the purpose of simplifying the code.

Along with the plan for the biennial publication of the statutes will be offered a complete revision of the printing laws, by which it is estimated that a saving of $30,000 a year will be effected. This proposed law will affect the printing of all public documents.

GEORGIA MURDER CASE UP FOR FOURTH TIME TODAY

Former Sheriff and Son, Charged with Murder, Heard Again on a Change of Venue.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Cordoba, Ga., Jan. 16.—The case of W. E. Lyons, former sheriff of Wayne county and his son, Archie, charged jointly with the killing of M. Fleming Smith at Jessup two years ago, was called for trial in the Crisp county court today, having been transferred here on a change of venue. This is the fourth trial of the noted case. The first trial resulted in life sentences for the prisoners. Mistrials resulted from the second and third hearings of the case.

A Test Was Made In Advertising

A test covering a period of six years was made regarding failures in advertising. Those who failed without exception used but 45% of the amount of space they should have used. In other words, they used but 45% as much space as the average used by those who succeeded.

One authority on advertising claims that a full page advertisement is worth ten times (not two times) as much as a half page and that a half page is worth five (not two) times as much as a quarter page. He claims that large space carries much more prestige and lends much more importance to the announcements.

In Janesville it has been noted on several campaigns, that where small space has failed to get results, the same sum of money spent in LARGE space has been successful.

Washington, D. C.—Like a thunder-bolt in a clear sky to the average American citizen comes the rumor, apparently emanating from a reliable source, that within six weeks the United States will in all probability be called upon to invade Cuba with troops; that armistices of war are being held in readiness for this move, and that bloodshed is expected before a stable government is again inaugurated in the island republic. In view of the threat made by President Taft in 1908 that if the Stars and Stripes should ever again fly above Cuba they would not be withdrawn, this has special significance.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

HE TRIED to do too much. I overheard those words on a trolley car today and it suddenly came over me that a very common epithet they would be if we used them whenever we had reason to.

An epithet not only for people, but also for business failures and very many other things.

For instance—surely somewhere in your memory is a Christmas—like as not the December 25th, just passed—over whose unhappy memory might well be written "I tried to do too much."

You tried to give more presents than you really and honestly had time and strength and finances for.

You were hurried and fussed and hurried about getting them done up and off in time.

You went in town the day before Christmas to get some ornaments for the tree which had been overlooked until then. Oh yes, you might easily have gotten something that would have been just what you had set your heart on, so you went in town and wore yourself out, body and mind and soul by contending with that wearying, confusing crowd of last minute shoppers.

And Christmas Eve you sat up until nearly midnight to finish that sofa pillow that had so much more work on it than you realized.

And Christmas morning you had to get up early because you were going to have all the relatives and have a very elaborate dinner.

And as an absolutely inevitable consequence of all this, on the day when "Peace and Good Will" should have reigned in your heart, you were cross and tired and hardly able to keep from bursting into tears. You didn't somehow take much pleasure in the gifts you received and it seemed to you that no one really liked what you gave.

All because you tried to do too much. And surely there is some vacation holiday in your life that was spoiled in this way. You wanted to have just so many new gowns. You wanted to do just so much shopping. You wanted to have everything just so ripe and again. You had a dozen little last things that simply had to be done, and so you went away tired and nervous and incapable of receiving the benefit from your vacation that you should have gotten.

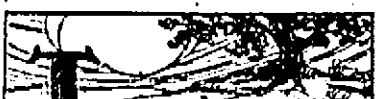

All because you tried to do too much. Again and again in business life I meet men and women—especially the latter, whose minds and numbers are confused, who rush from one thing to another without giving any one due attention, who follow up no subject thoroughly, who end in failure or with but half the success that might have been theirs because they try to do too much.

There is an inelegant expression for this method of dissipating our powers which I like for its forcefulness. It is "biting off more than one can chew."

I think this insane inclination to "bite off more than one can chew" is a disease of this generation—especially with the women.

To have the clearness of mind; to estimate one's ability and the strength of mind to live within it—surely these are capacities worth the having. Are they yours?

Breakfast Dishes.

Most housekeepers will agree that breakfast is the most difficult meal to provide variety. Here are a few unusual dishes which may suggest others and thus furnish a change.

Bacon Scramble.—Fry several slices of bacon until about half done; drain off part of the fat, and add six eggs well beaten; stir constantly until well cooked. A little grated onion may be added for flavor. Season with cooking.

Southern Buckwheat Cakes.—Four cups of buckwheat flour sifted, one-half a compressed yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of molasses. Mix with enough warm water to make a thin batter and set to rise over night.

For a breakfast fruit, grape fruit is one that is both appetizing and medicinal; a fresh apple or one baked and served with cream is another good dish. Stewed prunes, or a few dates steamed with the oatmeal are another favorite combination.

Codfish Balls.—Take a cup of shredded codfish, after soaking, two cups of mashed potatoes, one beaten egg, one and a half teaspoonfuls of butter, pepper to taste. Mold into cakes, three-fourths of an inch thick and saute in bacon fat. Serve a poached egg on each and garnish with fried bacon.

The omelet is a breakfast dish that should have a chapter to itself, as they are legion. However, all omelets are only variations of the plain omelet.

Beat three eggs, whites and yolks separately; add three tablespoonfuls of water to the beaten yolks, season with salt and pepper, cut and fold in the white and turn into a smoking-hot omelet pan that has been well buttered. Lower the heat at once, and when the bottom is browned, set in the oven to finish the top. Cut the edges on opposite sides and carefully fold and roll on the heated serving platter. Garnish with parsley.

ROOM AT THE TOP.

Don't be afraid that after you have trained yourself and worked hard in a calling there will be so much over-crowding you cannot get to the top of the ladder. There is always room at the top, but it takes grit to reach it. There is no overcrowding there. Every business concern in the country has difficulty in finding men to fill the big places in their establishments—the places that pay the big salaries.

There are plenty of mediocre people standing around waiting to fill those places, but they won't do. The demand of the things is for men who have fitted themselves to fill big places profitably—men who do not need to be told what to do next—but men who have initiative, men who have ideas, men who are continually training themselves for tomorrow's work and for tomorrow's opportunities.

At a business man's banquet in one of the larger cities recently one of the speakers—a very prominent man—said that there was a deplorable deficiency in the supply of capable men—men whom the hands of a concern could trust to carry on their business if they were suddenly called away, or men who could themselves perform work in the capacity of executive officers. In illustration, he said there were plenty of men capable of filling $1,200 jobs, but that the $12,000 ones went on begging tours looking for men who were fitted to take them up and fill them.

The spirit of discouragement has been abroad in the land for a number of years, set in motion by the thoughtless and uninformed person who has over been ready to declare that all fields of endeavor were overcrowded and that competition is so strong that there is no chance for ambitious men without influence to get places.

Such statements are both wrong and vicious. They are harmful because they kill aspiration, and aspiration is necessary to success.

Competition is strong, influence is necessary, but it is of the good old-fashioned quality—the influence of capacity to work, ability to perform and reliability in place of trust and responsibility. There are men who have gotten into good positions by family or political influence, but to hold those places they have had to prove themselves worthy. Business competition is so strong today that no concern can afford to keep men in its employ because they are friends or the sons of friends, or the sons of some one else's friend. The man must himself prove worth while; he must demonstrate that he has all the peculiar qualities for which the place calls.

Therefore, young man, don't worry about all the good places being filled.

FIGHT OVER RICHES OF FULTON BERRY—MAUDE LILLIAN BERRY MOULAN.

Fresno, Cal.—A bitter fight for control of the estate left by the late Fulton G. Berry, well known hotel man and yachting sportsman of Fresno, and San Francisco, is promised in a contest over the settling of the estate with Mrs. Berry, the widow, on one side, and on the other Eugene La Cour, nephew of the dead man and his confidential agent during his last years, and Maude Lillian Berry-Moulán, the comic opera prima donna, known to the stage as Maude Lillian Berry.

Those three were named by Berry as his executors, and have failed to agree in the management of the property, which principally consists of the Grand Central and Fulton hotels in this city. La Cour, with the approval, it is understood, of Maude Lillian Berry-Moulán, has proceeded to the management of the estate, very much against Mrs. Berry's wishes, and the latter has now begun action for partial distribution, which will be resisted by the others, who wish to continue to manage the property as one estate.

Mrs. Berry also asks the court to nullify a bequest of $2,500 to La Cour, on the ground that it is illegal, La Cour being a witness to the will.

It is said that one of the reasons that La Cour and Maude Lillian Berry-Moulán have taken the management of the property out of the hands of the widow is that they are afraid that she will manage the estate to the advantage of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Minnie Berry-Goodwin, who was practically cut off from inheritance by her father. The contest over the Berry property has aroused keen interest in Fresno, where the deceased was for so many years a leading citizen, and where his daughter began her musical and dramatic career.

but go ahead and fit yourself to fill the important place when opportunity offers it to you. Go after it as if the fate of the whole universe depended upon your getting it, and having gotten it, hold to it as if the fate of the same old universe depended upon your keeping it. COSTLY DRUGS.

Some Rare and Peculiar Substances Used in Medicine.

A writer in Wissen fuer Alle throws some interesting light on rare and peculiar drugs. Suffice it to say that would strike an ordinary observer as decidedly expensive at $13 a pound (to change marks into our currency), until told that it is composed of the central small portions only of the flowers of the crocus, 70,000 of which it takes to make a pound. Attar of roses sells at $112 odd per pound, and it takes 10,000 pounds, or nearly five tons of roses, to obtain one pound of the oil.

Acetiline, extracted from the root of monkshood, is said to be the very strongest poison extant, the dose being one six-hundredth of a grain. It is sold at the rate of $108 per ounce.

Tartarum from the vegetable to the animal world in search of rare drugs, the writer refers to the musk of the Asiatic deer, which at $21 to $30 an ounce must be a prize to the vily hunter. In some of the tropical seas a floating, sweet smelling mass of ambergris is met with worth at present $30 per ounce, or $450 per pound in the market. The ambergris is said to be the diseased biliary product of the whale.

Another peculiar product in use as a drug is a solution of the pure venom of the rattlesnake, given occasionally in malignant scarlet fever.

THE "COUP DE JARNAC."

A French Adage and Its Incident Upon Which It Rests.

The "coup de Jarnac" has become a French proverb, and it serves to distinguish a stroke as decisive as unforeseen which intervenes for the settlement of any affair. The adage rests upon an incident in the life of Gué Chabot, Seigneur de Jarnac, a noble of the court of Francis I. The tie passed between him and La Châtelgnerde, the daughter's favorite, King Francis, however, forbade the duel. At the succession of Henry II, the old quarrel was revived, and the overdue duel was fought on the plain of St. Germain with all the formality of the ancient judicial combats and in the presence of the whole court. Jarnac was weaker and less agile than his adversary, who was one of the noted aviators of the time, but he had taken lessons from an Italian bravo. In the duel Jarnac waited for an opening and then dealt La Châtelgnerde a heavy and unexpected stroke which hamstrung him. This was in 1547. Ten years later Jarnac was a captain in the defense of St. Quentin. Eventually he met his fate in a duel. But the "coup de Jarnac" is historic in the annals of sword play.—Argonaut.

Square Bullets.
In 1718 an Englishman, James Puckle, secured a British patent for what seems to have been an attempt at a breechloading rapid firing gun. An original feature of the invention was the use of two different breech plates, one for square bullets, to be used against the Turks, and the other for round bullets, to be used against Christians. It is curious to find two opposing tendencies in the same invention—first, the desire to construct a gun that should be more effective because more destructive, and, second, a desire to recognize certain ethical distinctions in its use. If a round bullet was too good for a Turk, a square one was too bad for a Christian.—London Chronicle.

The Shortest Name.
A correspondent thinks he has discovered the shortest shop front name in London. It is above a shop in Gray's Inn road—simply S. D. There is some sort of accent on the "e," but the sign writer seems doubtful about it. Can you beat that name for brevity?

The Pure Food Law.
Secretary Wilson says: "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Maritol Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. Close Observer.
Philip, eight years of age, already is a close if silent observer. In his town a number of men in the past few years have died, leaving their families unprotected. One day Philip's teacher asked him to define the word "widow." "A widow," replied thoughtfully Philip, "is a poor woman with a large family who takes boarders."

Forget your prejudice for just one baking

Lay aside your favorite baking powder for just once. Forget for a day that it is "the kind mother used." Dispense with the idea that there is "nothing else just as good." It may have served you admirably for years. But just remember, other things have improved since grandmother's time. So why not baking powder?

Get from your grocer today a can of Calumet Baking Powder. Bake a batch of biscuits, a cake or your favorite pastry. If the baking does not come out just as good, or better, than usual. If it is not as light, sweet and delicious. If it does not prove up to your high standard in every respect, providing of course you have in every other way exercised your usual methods, take the can of Calumet back to the grocer and get your money. This is our first step in making friends for Calumet. The continued good results, the purity, the economy in both cost and use will hold them.

OUR IMPRESSIONS MUST BE GUARDED

EXCELLENT SERMON BY REV. HAZEN ON "MAN—HIS EYE, EAR AND TONGUE."

SERVICE TO GODLY ENDS

On Part Of Organs Of Sight, Hearing And Speech Should Be Our Foremost Resolution.

Rev. J. C. Hazen delivered a strong sermon at the Baptist church, Sunday evening on the subject, "Man—His Eye, Ear and Tongue," which was the second sermon of the series on "Man." The text for the sermon was found in Matt. 18:1, "And I say unto thee, whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are in heaven, he shall offend against me." The sermon was a most timely and practical one, and was well received by the congregation.

When we speak of a man, neighbor or friend, we think of a person whose life is complete and we do not think of any particular part of his body unless, perhaps, some part is missing. It is hard for us to realize that it would be to get along without some one of our organs for a time and we can scarcely appreciate what it is to a person to have a deficiency of this sort.

"As soon as a person begins to live, certain impressions come through the eye and ear, and they become firmly fixed so that it is hard to destroy them. And so the parents of the child are careful to guard these impressions so that they may be from the first pure and clean and innocent."

"Sometimes on our way through life we find an individual whose eye is gone and all the pleasure of life that comes through that member is lost. And when the tongue of the young babe is silent the anguish of the family when they find it out for the first time, is scarcely imaginable. We are slow to give due value to the eye, the ear, and the tongue, for by them all of the world becomes yours, but one or all of them gone and the world which comes to us through them is gone also."

But there are persons who have these deficiencies who go out and put the rest of us to shame, and we marvel at the accomplishments of a person like Helen Keller whose life is full of good in spite of her handicaps."

There are worse things in this life than the loss of an eye. Yet through the eye we are able to see the beauties of God's world about us and it is a wonderful privilege. And through the ear we get exquisite impressions of sound, and so it is with the tongue. But Jesus said it would literally be better for you to open your eye lids and pluck out your eye and cast it from you rather than to have two eyes and be lost."

"It is true that the eye can actually lead to destruction. What is the difference as far as I am concerned when I look into your pocketbook and covet its contents? I have aimed just as though I committed the overt act. An individual through the eye can go out and commit a sin, and thus when the eye leads the person to that condition that it controls and fascinates, would it not be better if it were removed?"

"Sometimes the eye is so drawn by a picture or a scene and it dwells on it for so long that the person actually goes out to do just what the eye sees. Sometimes the eye searches for some certain page picturing some scene which should bring the blush of shame, and when the eye serves us in this way it would actually be better, as far as our soul or our future condition is concerned, that it were gone. Thus we fall prey to the eye and its dissipation, which leads to sin."

"And along with the eye comes the ear. It has been said that it is not so important what we hear as how we hear it. And it is largely true. One may attend a church service and seem to be listening to the sermon while in reality his thoughts are far away. One may hear an oath on the street but it is not necessary for you to adopt it as a part of your speech. It lies with you what response you may make to what you hear and we need to be cautious regarding the impressions which come to us through the ear at all times and in all places."

"Do certain stories, tales and gossip which awaken you as when some Godly message is presented? We can cultivate the ear as well as the eye and other tastes, and can make it respond to the words which will mean for our moral uplift and help. Have the impressions in your life been for the good? What have been the impressions which have marked the record points in your life?"

"The tongue is as important as the other members and may be used for good or harm. One casual remark may drive away a friend forever, and important as the tongue is it would be better to cast it out rather than use it in an ungodly way. It would be better to make this sacrifice than to sacrifice your soul living within you."

"Let us keep then our eyes, our ears and our tongues clean and use them for our own good and for the salvation and help of mankind."

CENTRAL M. C. A. GO DOWN BEFORE LOCALS

Lakotas Defeated Chicago Five In Hard Fought Contest At West Side Rink.

The Lakotas added another victory to their list Saturday night by defeating the Central M. C. A. Cardinals of Chicago at the west side rink, in a hard fought contest, by a score of 17 to 8.

The rink was packed with enthusiastic supporters of the game and one of the fastest exhibitions of basketball of the season was their reward. The first half proved to be an exhibition of fast work and determination on both sides the visitors leading at one time by two points. Langdon's position at right guard, was filled for the first few minutes by King, the former being laid up with a sore throat and bad cold. He was forced to enter the game however, on account of injuries to King's knee early in the game.

From the beginning of the second half it was evident that the visitors would have to better their already fast team work if they wanted to hold their own with the locals, but they were not equal to the task. The speedy and machine-like work of the Lakotas was too much for them and while the latter aggregation piled up nine additional scores the others did not tally. Janesville, in this half, substituted Murphy for Robertson and Chicago, Snow for McLane. While the local team scored nine to their opponent's nothing in this half, they had no easy time as the Y. M. C. A. men fought hard and contested every point. Following was the line-up:

Chicago: Dolt, rf; Renz, lf; Parker, c; Thompson, rg; McLane and Snow, bk.

Janesville: Cunningham, rf; Robertson and Murphy, lf; Sennet, c; Langdon and King, rg; Green, bk.

Baskets, Janesville: Robertson 1; Sennet 1; King 1; Langdon 3; Murphy 2; Cunningham 1.

Chicago: Renz 2; Dolt 1; Parker 1; Fouls: Sennet 1.

Referee: Harter. Umpire: Carl. Timekeeper: Phelps.

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

"CALL OF THE WILD."

"Stage realism," said Franklin Woodruff, who will be seen in his new play "Call of the Wild," at the Myers Theatre Tuesday, Jan. 17, "has developed so far in the last few years that except in certain isolated cases the old time 'gross' have no place in a modern production. I believe that the public has come to look upon the stage as an educational factor of no mean value, and so, to demand that they be given real things instead of false; as in the past. Take, for example, this production of 'Call of the Wild.' One would hardly believe the lengths to which we have gone to make everything not only seem real, but real. As you know, the play is founded on those fascinating tales of the west written by Frederick Remington the famous artist. When we begin to make ready this production, Mr. Remington was emphatic in his desire to have everything as nearly perfect as is possible in these days. Take for instance the alkali dust to be seen on the uniforms of the soldiers. As a rule stage dust is made from what we call 'filler's earth.' This did not suit Mr. Remington at all, for he declared that it was not a bit like the alkali dust from Wyoming. We made no further effort to imitate but sent all the way to Red Butte, Wyoming, and had them ship us three barrels of dust from the plains there. This will last us all season. Another item was the log hut in the woods. Our stage carpenter made what he thought was a very good log hut but it was not at all like the real thing; this time we went still further to spare the play, which by the way is the actual scene of the play, where Mr. Remington knew there was a hut such as he wanted. This was carefully taken down, placed on wagons and dragged nearly one hundred miles across the hills to the nearest railway station. It was then loaded on flat cars and shipped to New York. Mr. Remington wanted us to use that hut on the stage but allowed us to make a perfect copy of it when he found that it would take four men a full day to set it up and as long again to take it down, which, of course was not practicable. Still the hut we use in the play is exactly like the one in the mountains. Another item was that of weapons; we have secured rifles actually in use during the Indian wars, two of them, in fact, having been found on the field of the Custer massacre, the battle of the Little Big Horn. As far as possible we use uniforms which were actually in use in the year 1878, in which the events from which our play is made transpired in actual life. John Ermine, the character which I portray, really lived and so did nearly all the other characters in the play, which to my mind gives it a tremendous interest. I know I take more pleasure in portraying that wonderfully brave young scout Ermine than in any character I have ever before impersonated. He was a wonderful man. Another item was the production that gave us trouble was the army wagons we use on the camp at night. It was not possible to secure army wagons but we were able to secure the exact specifications; furnished the Studebakers and a model of that wagon was furnished; from this the wagons used in our production were made. They are perfectly practicable."

Basket Ball.

The Evansville high school basketball team started their schedule Friday evening by defeating the Brooklyn high school team by a score of 61 to 14. The girls game between the alumni and high school resulted in a score of 10 to 9 in favor of the high school girls. Both games were very interesting and a large crowd was in attendance.

Coasting Party.

Earl Fellows entertained a party of young people at his home at Fellows Station Saturday. A delightful afternoon was spent in coasting and playing reasonable games. The party was composed of the Misses Beth Baker, Barbara Pearson, Ellean Ballard, Marian Calkins and Lura Morrison and Messrs. Everett Van Patten, Robert Antos, Wesley Langenick and Harold Griffith.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Astell Johnson spent a part of Saturday with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lyne. They had just returned from a ten days wedding journey spent with relatives in New York state. They left this morning for their future home in Janesville.

Mr. and Mrs. Burr Tolles spent Sunday with friends in Brooklyn.

William Hines of Albany, visited Evansville relatives Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Walworth will return tomorrow from a visit to relatives in Jefferson.

Mrs. Lila Dixon of Janesville, spent Saturday afternoon in Evansville.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Baldwin visited Brooklyn relatives yesterday.

NEW GLARIUS.

New Glarus, Jan. 14.—A wedding license was taken out by Henry M. Durst, son of Sam Durst, and Mrs. Louisa Durst.

The daughter of John Adan Jr., is on the sick list.

Emil Slaughter has given up his job as engineer in the New Glarus electric light plant. He will continue to work until they can get a successor. Quite a crowd attended the musical dance given by the G. U. G. Germanian.

Last Saturday morning died, after an illness of 9 months, Anna C. Corne, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1850, and for the last 15 years had made her home in New Glarus. She is survived by two daughters, one sister and three brothers. Her remains were taken to Dayton.

Glenn Hilton who is working as fireman on the I. C. R. R. has been visiting at home.

MIND AND MATTER.

A man who had eaten of a rabbit became suddenly sick and vomited when he was assured that it was a cat. The belief that a food is good, makes it good, to a degree, but no mental state can alter the fact that tissue cannot be formed without albumen, and that fat produces about two and a half times as much heat as sugar. It is well to recognize the influence of the mind, in the cause and cure of disease, and in the selection of food, but mental influence cannot annul the physical. Food is material, and a stone will not do for bread nor will alcohol serve for milk nor rice for nuts.

Curious Toy.

A curious toy which is common in Europe and less known in this country is very popular in China, Korea and Japan. It represents a round figure with a head but without arms and legs. This is really, in its origin, a figure of Daruma, the priest who sat wrapped in a state of abstraction until his limbs disappeared.

REAL ESTATE TO BE HIGHER IN EDGERTON

Business Activities in the Tobacco City Result in Increase of Property Values.

(Special to this Gazette.)

Edgerton, Jan. 16.—With the advent of the wagon works recently started and which is now running nearly in full capacity and bids fair to be a prosperous and influential acquisition to the city, comes also a raise in the price of real estate. It is safe to state that the raise in price will be of one-third, and in the "Edgerton" part of the city where the wagon works are located the value of the real estate will probably increase one-half.

Frank Brown, the retiring member of the Brown & Pringle department store, and who but a few days ago bought a business lot on Henry street to erect a brick business block thereon, is the first one to buy two building lots of H. C. Schmelling in the eastern part of the city, near the wagon works, for $125 per lot, or $250 for the two. This is considered a bargain and Mr. Schmelling asserts that by next spring and summer the lots will increase in value to $300 each.

She nodded, picked up the journal and crossed over with it to another of the bunks. There she seated herself, tucked her feet up comfortably under her, tailor-fashion, and, propping her chin upon one palm, began to read. The light coming from behind her made, to Cayley's vision, a misty halo of her hair, and played softly over the cheek and the fingers that were half embedded in it.

The sight of her made it hard for him to stick to his maps. But presently he looked up with a sudden question. "Do you happen to find anything?" he began, and then broke off shortly.

From her face, half-shaded as it was, he could see that what she had been reading just then was no mere description of this land upon which they had been cast away, but something far more personal to the father who had lost here.

"There's something perfectly terrifying," she said, "about father's description of this man Roscoe. Over here near the end, before the sun came back to them, he tells of going out for a walk by himself and of discovering that Roscoe was stalking him, in the hope, he thought, of discovering, in advance of the others, where the gold ledge was. In the twilight, father says, he looked, in his white bear-skins, perfectly enormous and incredible. And Philip—"

She closed the book, holding it tight in both hands, and leaning forward a little as she went on, "and Philip, his description sounds—oh, I suppose it's silly, but it sounds like the thing I thought I saw today when I was alone there on the beach, before you came flying down out of the sky. It didn't look like a bear. It wouldn't have been so dreadful if it had."

"It's possible," he said gravely, "it may have been he whom I frightened off when I came down last night. Certainly there was somebody, and that somebody may still be here on shore, though I suppose he had gone out to join in the attack on the yacht. But it's very strange, if there is any one, that we could have passed a whole day without encountering him."

The girl shivered; then, with a shudder of her head as if dismissing the uncanny thought from her mind, said: "You started to ask me about something else, and I interrupted."

It took him a moment to collect his thoughts. "Oh, yes. There's something marked here on this map which I took at first for the location of the hut, but it appears now that it was marked before they built it. I wonder if, in the early pages of the journal, there was a description of any natural formation about here like a cave, or—"

She made as if to open the book, then, suddenly, changed her intention and held it out to him, instead.

"I haven't been playing fair," she said. "I wasn't really looking for anything. I was just reading stories and dreaming over them. It's his handwriting, I think, that makes it so hard to be good. It's—well, almost like hearing his voice. Won't you work the book and the maps and give me something to do—with my hands, I mean?—oh, I know, I'm tired, but that doesn't matter."

Cayley's first impulse was to refuse, but it needed only one thoughtful look into her face to convince him that the kindest, as well as the wisest, thing was to do as she asked. An uncanny horror of the monstrous Roscoe and the appalling idea that he, and perhaps others of his gang, might be sharing the solitude of this frozen coast with them was plainly to be read in her eyes, and her own prescription for dispelling it was probably the best that could be thought of.

With a nod of assent, he rose and went into the storeroom, returning the next moment with an armful of heavy rope.

"In the old days of wooden ships," he said, "when they wanted to discipline a sailor, they set him to picking oakum. Next to pounding rust off the anchor, it's the dustiest job in the world. But we need some for caking up the cracks in our walls. Do you mind?"

"Mind!" she echoed. "Did you think I wanted to do embroidery?"

He showed her how the work was to be done, and in five minutes she was busily engaged at it. She had moved to another bunk, a little further from the fire, and with innocent artifice, had contrived that the big soft sleeping-bag should be spread out under her.

Meanwhile he plunged into a systematic search, through journal and maps, for the thing that was to spell either life or death for them.

At the end of an hour he looked up suddenly, an exclamation of triumph on his lips. But at the sight of her, it died out in a smile. She had slipped down on the sleeping-bag, her head cradled in the crook of one arm. And she was fast asleep.

CHAPTER XV.

Discoveries.

The sunlight of another crystalline day had made a path of gold across the floor and half way up the wall when Philip roused himself from what he had intended to make the merest catnap on one of the bunks, and with difficulty rubbed his eyes open. The savour of something good to eat was already in his nostrils.

Jeanne, with her back to him, was bending over the fire, busy with the breakfast. She heard him stirring, and looked around.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't mean to bang that pan down that way. I meant you to go on sleeping for hours and hours."

Looking fairly at him as he sat there on the bunk she saw his hands clutch tightly over the edge of it; saw the color go ebbling out of his face and then come surging back again. She had seen him do that once before.

"Why—what's the matter, Philip?" she asked.

"It's just the wonder of you," he said slowly; "of waking up to find you here, busy about this home of ours—as if it were all true. I've been very deep asleep."

"You'd better get ready for breakfast," she said, in a tone whose matter-of-fact infection was a little exaggerated. "It's nearly ready."

When they had finished, and while they still sat face to face across the board plank which had served them for a table, Cayley leaned forward a little and, smiling, asked a question.

"What's the secret, Jeanne? Your eyes have been shining with mystery ever since we sat down here."

She laughed. "You're much too penetrating. I didn't mean you even to dream there was a mystery to penetrate. But—well, it's time to tell you now, any way."

She, too, leaned forward a little and shook her head at him with a tantalizing air of triumph.

"You didn't find the thing you were looking for last night in father's journal—this place where they hid the stores, I mean."

"Oh, but I did!" he cried. "I only waited to give you time to eat a necessary and sensible breakfast before I spoke of it. I had it on the tip of my tongue to suggest that we set about finding it in good earnest, when I saw, in your eyes, that you had a mystery of your own."

It was evident from the look in those eyes now that she was both surprised and puzzled.

"You found it last night!" she exclaimed. "Found it in the journal, and then never want to look at it?"

"Why, I found an unmistakable reference to it, and though the exact location wasn't given, it was plain that three or four hours' exploring by daylight would enable us to find it. But even if I hadn't minded leaving you asleep here, unprotected, in the hut, I doubt very much if I could have found it at night. But what's the mystery you were about to reveal to me?"

"No," she said; "tell me more about your discovery first. What was the reference in the journal?"

He rose and took down from the shelf the big leather-bound volume which was proving itself, with every hour, their greatest treasure.

"It's over here, toward the end," he said, "in that last winter when the Walrus came—oh, here we are."

He seated himself on the bunk beside her, and began to read.

"March 10th.—We have just spent an arduous and fearful week upon the task of unloading the wreck of the whaler. The weather has been severe—bitterly cold (—10 degrees Fahrenheit—the mildest)—and three-quarters of a gale blowing most of the time. The men are inclined to be rebellious over my driving them out to work in such weather, but I dared not wait for it to moderate."

"When the ice opens round the whaler, she will go down like a plume!"

met; and if that event should have happened before we unloaded her of her stores, our plight would have been utterly desperate. Of stores in the ordinarily accepted sense, she had but a scanty supply, and those of a miserably inferior description; but she contained half a cargo of whale oil in barrels, which now that they are landed will settle the problem of fuel for us as long as the last survivor of our company can hope to remain alive. And fuel is, after all, the only necessity which this land itself does not supply us with. Of course we shall have to forgo the delights of bear steak when our ammunition gives out, but walrus' we can kill with harpoons. And with these and scurvy-grass, which we gather in the valley every summer, there is no danger of actual starvation.

"We hoisted the barrels of blubber out of the whaler's hold with a hand tackle, slung them ashore along the floe and the crown of the glacier to Moseley's cave, which seemed to be the most convenient place to store them temporarily."

Cayley laid down the book and turned to the girl.

"That's the place, I'm perfectly sure," he said. "It evidently faces the glacier, but it must be very near the beach, for they wouldn't have hauled those barrels any further than necessary."

"Is that all he says about it?"

"It's all he says directly, but there's a reference just a little further along which made me all the surer I was right. . . . Let's see."

He opened the book again and ran his eye down the page. "—A hundred-weight or so of spermaceti and two barrels of sperm oil we took directly to the hut—here, this is what I was looking for."

"The knowledge we got by experience often comes too late to be of any great service to us. I made some mistakes in stripping the Phoenix, which I should not repeat now. For instance, carrying her pilot house, with infinite labor, up to the cliff-head for an observatory. It is thoroughly impracticable for this purpose. I doubt if I have visited it three times since Mr. Moseley's death—"

"He was the astronomer and botanist of father's expedition," said the girl.

Cayley read on: "But now that I have learned my lesson, I have but little to apply the knowledge to. The Walrus is, I believe, the most utterly wretched hulk that ever sailed the seas—ill-found, detestably dirty and literally rotting to pieces. We shall, however, get enough planks and timbers out of her to build a shed or two near the hut, for the more convenient storage of our supplies."

Again he closed the book. "That's what I was looking for," he said. "You see they brought that stuff down from the cave to those sheds; so the cave would be almost inevitably the first hiding place they would think of when the sight of the Aurora drove them to hustle everything out of sight."

"Whereabout on the cliff is the observatory, Philip?"

"I was wondering about that. I've flown across the cliff a number of times, but have never seen anything of it. He may have wrecked it; taken it down and used it for some other purpose."

"No," she said; "he'd hardly have had time for that. There weren't many more pages to write in the journal when he made that entry."

She fell then into a little abstracted silence, which the man did not know how to break. But presently she roused herself and came fully back to the present, back to him.

"Did you succeed in accounting for the things you asked me about last night, the mark on the map right here where they built the hut afterward?"

"I didn't find anything about it in the journal, but this morning, before breakfast, when I went outside the hut, one glance at the fact of the cliff accounted for it fully. The cliff is split right here, from top to bottom, by a deep, narrow fissure. The fissure is full of ice, which I suppose hasn't melted for a thousand years. No summer that they could have in a high latitude like this would ever melt it, certainly."

The girl laughed and rose from her place at the rude table.

"Well," she asked, "are you ready for my discovery now?"

She took down his pocket electric bulb-eye from the shelf behind her, held out a hand to him and, on tip-toe, led him, with a burlesque exaggeration of mystery, out into the storeroom. As completely mystified in reality as she playfully pretended to want him to be, Cayley followed.

Nut Cake

Simply Delicious

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of The Boston Cooking School Magazine

In giving this recipe, Mrs. Hill believes it to be one of the best all-around cake recipes it has been her good fortune to make. The simplicity and uniformly good results will appeal to every housewife.

K C Nut Cake

One-half cup butter; 1½ cups granulated sugar; ½ cup milk; 2 cups flour; 2 level teaspoonsful K C Baking Powder; 1 cup of nut meats chopped fine; whites of 4 eggs, beaten dry.

Sift flour and baking powder together, three times. Cream the butter, add the sugar, then alternately, the milk and the flour mixture; lastly the whites of eggs and the nut meats. Bake in a sheet pan shallow pan thirty or forty minutes at 375° F. (190° C.). Cover with the icing and decorate with whole nut meats. This is an excellent white cake recipe when nut meats are omitted.

Chocolate Ice-cream

One cup granulated sugar; ½ ounce chocolate, white of 1 egg, beaten dry; ½ teaspoonful vanilla extract; ½ cup water.

Stir the sugar, chocolate and water until the mixture boils; cover and let boil three minutes. Uncover and let boil till when tested in cold water a soft ball may be formed; beat into the white of egg, then beat until cold, add vanilla.

The nut cream frosting given on page forty of the K C Cook's Magazine may be used in place of the chocolate frosting, if desired. A copy of the Cook's Magazine, handsomely illustrated in 9 colors, will be mailed free, if you will send us the colored certificate tucked in 2-cent cups of K C Baking Powder in the JACOBS DRUG CO. Chicago.

MENTAL EFFECTS OF HIGH ASCENTS

The average individual would refuse to ascend in an aeroplane swayed by the emotion of fear. And this emotion has some place with every aeronaut at the beginning of his career, if indeed it be not present in a degree at every flight. Only as it is controlled, however, is it possible for him to keep the "level head" absolutely necessary to manage his machine and prevent the very things that he is afraid of. If fear becomes the master, judgment and decision alike fail.

People walking over high and exposed places are told not to look down, but the aeronaut must look down in order to see where he is going, for there is nothing in the air by which to mark his progress. If the awful height to which he has attained and the awful fall to which he is exposed get possession of his mind he becomes "rattled," loses control and plunges to his death. A sudden realization when aloft in the sky may quite deprive one of self-possession.

On the other hand, confidence in the perfection of one's craft and consciousness of his own ability to handle it will greatly aid in lifting him above fearfulness. Moreover, one's mind must be so occupied in handling the ship that his thoughts are withdrawn from danger.

The mind is buoyed up also by the sense of exhilaration which comes with surmounting all objects and rushing through space at terrific speed. There is a growing sense of triumph which is one of security and beguets an utter indifference to the possibilities of accident and even death. It is much like the excitement which men feel on going into battle. They dread it for hours and days, but now that they are in it they have not a care.

So also the plaudits of the multitude of spectators, the thought of glory and honor and of substantial rewards and the unwillingness to turn out a coward after attempting to be a hero—all have powerful influence in holding the mind to its task.

It may be added finally that not a little stirring of emotion is found in ever changing views of the earth as one withdraws from it into space such as cannot be obtained even from the highest mountain top.

Robber Catarrh

Steals Energy and Will Power From its Victims.

Catarrh robs its victim of energy—some physicians say of will power. That may be the reason why thousands of catarrh sufferers haven't ambition enough to accept this fair and square offer by The People's Drug Co., which they make without any whys and wherefores or red tape of any kind.

The People's Drug Co. say, "We guarantee HYOMEL to cure catarrh, acute or chronic, or money back," and that offer is open to every reader of the Gazette.

HYOMEL (pronounce it High-ome) is the purest Australian Eucalyptus combined with Thymol and other germ killing antiseptics.

Put a few drops into the small vest pocket HYOMEL Inhaler and breathe it into the lungs over the inflamed membrane infested with catarrh germs.

It is pleasant to use—it kills the germs, soothes the sore membrane, and cures catarrh; if it doesn't your money back.

A bottle of HYOMEL costs 50 cents at The People's Drug Co.; and druggists everywhere. A complete outfit, which includes a bottle of HYOMEL, a hard rubber inhaler and ample instructions for use costs $1.00.

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned by the association to sell it in Janesville.

New Recipe for Home Made Laxative Cough Cure.

Cure.

A cough or cold is due to congestion and inflammation of the membranes of the throat and lungs. Something to overcome the congestion is necessary if you expect a cure. Morphine and chloroform preparations relieve, but they do not cure—only aggravate ultimately and weaken the natural resistance and health.

There is a formula that will cure chronic cases of old people and acute coughs of old or young:
Lawson's menthol-laxene . . . 2½ Ozs.
Granulated sugar syrup . . . 13½ Ozs.
Get the rawness menthol-laxene of any well stocked drugstore, empty it into a pint bottle and fill up the bottle with syrup made as follows: Take a pint of granulated sugar; pour over it a half pint of boiling water, stir and let cool. Then add it to the menthol-laxene and take a teaspoonful every hour or two as needed. This will break up any cold, cure sore throat, relieve coughing instantly, loosen the tightest cough and soon cure by the laxative tonic action, differing from everything ever heard of.

Try this simple but effective formula and you will forever bless the day you learned of it, and you'll save $3 or $4 besides.
